Building or planning a Bitcoin startup?

🙋‍♀️ Raise your hand.

Boy! You've chosen an interesting problem for yourself.

CONGRATULATIONS. YOU CHOSE...

THE HARDEST BOSS BATTLE.

Difficulty Level: 500%

Customers don't care. Marketing doesn't work. Distribution is broken.

Came for the bull. Clocked out for the bear.

Many bitcoiners stop caring in the bear cycle — which we are in.

The other 1.4 billion Indians? They've never thought about Bitcoin. Not once.

Want to run Bitcoin ads?

REJECTED.

✕	Google Ads	Crypto advertising requires certification & ongoing compliance
✕	Meta / Instagram	Crypto ads require prior written permission. Often denied.
✕	Twitter / X	Allowed but requires financial services certification per market

Go organic? 📱

📉

High CAC

Cost per Bitcoin-curious user is 3–5× a regular fintech customer — a niche audience in a restricted channel.

🤖

AI Slop

Feeds are flooded with AI-generated content. Organic reach is dying. Your post disappears in seconds.

😮‍💨

Fatigue

People have learned to scroll past anything that looks like marketing. Especially in crypto.

CURRENT WORKAROUNDS

Smart founders already figured it out.

B4I Community

↓ powers ↓

Bitcoin Keeper

Keeper built B4I to demo their custody product to a warm, pre-qualified Bitcoin audience — without paying for ads.

Bitcoin Bharat

SwapSo

SwapSo's founding team built Bitcoin Bharat so college students could discover and use SwapSo through community first.

Bitcoinwaale

GetBit

GetBit created Bitcoinwaale — a Bitcoin education community — so more Indians discover GetBit through learning, not ads.

BUT THIS MODEL HAS PROBLEMS

Building your own community breaks at scale.

🧠

Org time & energy

Organising meetups, community management, 1-on-1 guidance, customer education — all diverts from building the product.

🗺️

Physical presence across cities

Every city has its own nuance. Language, examples, culture — you can't copy-paste what works in Bangalore to Delhi.

⚙️

Operations & hiring

Booking venues, hiring educators, speakers, managing invites, attendance — a full-time job with no playbook.

✈️

Travel & accommodation budget

Team members flying in for every city activation. It burns cash fast with no direct attribution to revenue.

📊

End-to-end attribution

Who came? Who touched the product? Who activated? Who's a warm lead? Without tracking, it's all vanity.

IRL events & community management are the most effective way to get to a billion+ Indians.

But Bitcoin products and services lack the execution & operations muscle to actualise it.

Two big forces are on our side.

1

Bitcoin mentors & community are seeded in major Indian cities

Thanks to years of work by Bitshala and other Bitcoin communities, a dense mentor network exists across Delhi, Mumbai, Bangalore, Hyderabad, Chennai, Ahmedabad, and Goa — trained, ready to demo and onboard.

2

The pendulum is swinging back offline

People are burned out by social media and AI-generated content. The new generation wants to experience things in person. The utility of being terminally online is decreasing fast — and we meet people exactly where they are going next.

The pendulum is swinging back offline.

People want to meet in person. They want to hold the hardware. They want to feel the experience — not scroll past another post about it.
